

Call for Learning Institute HQP Applications

The BioCanRx Cancer Stakeholder Alliance Learning Institute is entering its' 4th year, having debuted at BioCanRx's annual scientific conference - Summit for Cancer Immunotherapy (Summit4CI) in 2017. BioCanRx is a federally funded network that aims to bring promising cancer immunotherapies to clinic by using a network approach - funding researchers, providing training, and engaging key stakeholders including patients and caregivers. The Learning Institute was established by the Cancer Stakeholder Alliance with the overall aim of training patient scholars in cancer immunotherapy with the intention of growing patient experts in this field. The event brings together patients or caregivers and BioCanRx HQP. These LI participants engage in a series of interactive knowledge exchange sessions with the purpose of teaching patients about the emerging and innovative concepts in immuno-oncology and provide HQP an opportunity to learn from patients and get feedback about their research. The ultimate goals are bidirectional learning for both the patient advocates and HQP.

The LI serves to highlight the concept of patient engagement that refers to the meaningful and active collaboration of patients/caregivers, researchers, health care providers, and decision-makers to build a sustainable, accessible, and equitable health care system. Engagement with patients/caregivers ensures that the research process is more transparent, and provides key insights into the health research priorities of patients. In addition, patient engagement ensures that research conducted is relevant to patients' concerns. Patient engagement in the early stages of study design leads to improved practice and treatment. The LI at the Summit4CI provides participants with the opportunity to translate, synthesize and disseminate scientific research into lay language relevant to patient groups in health policy and systematic treatment access initiatives. As an HQP participant, you will work alongside a patient leader/caregiver to ensure they are familiar with the research concepts in immuno-oncology presented at the Summit4CI.
